Contepomi Names Argentina Squad for Autumn Internationals

Felipe Contepomi has confirmed a 34-man training squad ahead of Argentina’s preparations for the Autumn Internationals. The players and staff will assemble for a three-day camp running from October 27 to 29, which will serve as the final opportunity for those on the fringes to strengthen their selection prospects for next month’s international fixtures.

The latest roster shows several changes from the group that contested the Rugby Championship. Joel Sclavi, Gonzalo García, and Tomas Albornoz, each of whom missed the final round against South Africa, remain unavailable due to lingering injuries.

Their exclusion from this camp does not necessarily rule them out of the Autumn Internationals 2025, but it suggests that their return is expected later in the tour rather than for the opening fixture. Contepomi has brought back more than half a dozen familiar names as Argentina continues to fine-tune preparations for the demanding international series ahead.

The call-ups include loose-head prop Tomas Gallo, tight-head Pedro Delgado, locks Alemanno and Efrain Elias, flanker Benjamin Grondona, scrum-half Gonzalo Bertranou, and fly-half Nicolas Roger. Alemanno and Elias feature for the first time in 2025: the former brings 98 caps of international experience, while the latter had been sidelined through injury during the July Tests and the Championship.

Autumn Internationals 2025: Argentina Announce Squad with Key Absences and Rising Stars

The remainder of the group have all represented Los Pumas at various points this year. Notably missing from the list are veteran center Moroni and props Ignacio Calles and Eduardo Bello. Moroni was omitted from concern, while both Calles and Bello are still regaining full match fitness ahead of the Autumn Internationals 2025, where Argentina will aim to field their strongest possible lineup for the series.

Other absentees include fly-half Domingo Miotti, second-rowers Tomas Lavanini and Lucas Paulos, No. 8 Facundo Isa, and hooker Bautista Bernasconi, all of whom were overlooked for selection. The Argentine Union has also released its comprehensive Player Pool, listing every athlete involved in senior training squads along with their clubs, positions, and cap tallies.

Los Pumas are set to face Wales, Scotland, and England in an all-UK tour this November, concluding their Autumn Internationals 2025 calendar. The tour will precede the official draw for the Rugby World Cup 2027, making positive results essential to maintain Argentina’s place among the world’s top six, a position that ensures a favorable seeding for the upcoming Autumn Internationals tournament.

Among the key players entering this series in standout form is winger Bautista Delguy. He finished joint second on the try-scoring charts in the 2025 Rugby Championship with three tries, just one behind Joseph Sua’ali’i and Malcolm Marx, who each crossed four times. Delguy scored crucial tries against both Australia and South Africa, displaying his signature pace, footwork, and finishing instinct.

Scotland Vs Argentina: Delguy in Form as Argentina Prepare for Autumn Internationals

His explosive pace and sharp finishing have made him a constant threat on the wings, and he has added to his try tally while maintaining an exceptional work rate. As anticipation builds for the upcoming Scotland vs Argentina clash, Delguy’s club form serves as a timely boost for Los Pumas, highlighting his readiness to make a major impact during the Autumn Internationals 2025.

Despite suffering a minor concussion earlier in October, Delguy returned to action quickly, showing resilience and determination to contribute effectively to his club’s campaign. His consistent performances at the domestic level underline his importance to Argentina’s backline heading into the November Autumn Internationals.

Meanwhile, Scotland and Argentina have developed one of the most captivating rivalries in modern Test rugby. Their intense 2022 series in Salta and the razor-tight clash in Edinburgh a year later highlighted both teams' defensive strength and tactical discipline. This November's rematch, the third fixture of Scotland's Quilter Nations Series schedule, promises another enthralling contest filled with physical confrontations and attacking flair.

Both nations enter the encounter with pride and ambition, eager to make a lasting impression as preparations intensify for the 2026 season. For Felipe Contepomi's men, the Autumn Internationals are more than just warm-up matches; they offer a crucial opportunity to test depth, strengthen cohesion, and build momentum ahead of the next Rugby World Cup cycle.
